Notes from the Prez

by Jim Dinkey

So you want to run Vista to get in on all of the hype?

You can do it by running Virtual PC on your XP computer and installing/running Vista in simulation mode. Then when Vista screws up, all you need to do is to drop back to XP.

This assumes the computer can handle it by having about 2 GB of memory and a fairly recent video card. If you don't have the latest video, then one of the minor features will not be able to be used.

Don't forget to shell out $200 for the install kit and license.

This is one realistic way to go while you wait for SP1 of Vista about a year from now. At the rate the patches have been coming out, it appears that SP1 might be hurried along a bit.

The real problem is that Vista still is missing a lot of drivers and ability to run certain programs successfully. Third party software developers are still recoding their products for Vista.

Microsoft has released a list of 800 programs that do run properly so your obligation is to find the list and check that all of the drivers and programs are going to work. Is this where you want to spend your time when your objective is to write letters and handle email?

I know that someone will bring in a copy of Vista to the Clinic and I will be expected to handle and correct it. In practice, this is what has already happened with Hank of Datawise wherein he was presented with an installation that crashed and he was expected to fix the mess. The problem was that Microsoft had changed all of the names of the routines to similar but barely recognizable nomenclature and moved all of the locations of the routines to new locations—all for no good reason. So something that had been in the same general location through Win 95, 98, NT, 2000, and XP was now elsewhere. This knowledge can be learned, but it seems unnecessarily difficult. After my ear stopped burning, we were able to discuss the item at hand.

In the meantime I am perfecting my XP skills. One aid to controlling the XP experience is the use of a DeCrapifier that will appear on the SPAUG CD that is actually aimed at the Dell computers but works on all computers.

You will remember that Dell sells a pretty cheap computer because a lot of vendors pay Dell to preinstall their product onto the computer and to set the computer so that all of the software is started at boot time. Makes for a long and interesting boot.

The program is the result of a guy discovering all of the crapware on the computer and making a program that identifies and systematically runs around the computer removing the unwanted programs. Leaves a lean and fast computer.

The program runs on any computer. It may not find all of the crapware, but what it does find will be a great benefit. Generally, anyone who pays Dell to put on their software will go to other vendors and pay them also.

So the cat is out of the bag—the SPAUG CD is coming right along and you just had a little preview of a new feature. Our thanks to Bill Worthington assisted by Ron Nicholas.

A company I work with just has moved all of its operations from Earthlink to another supplier. Because we had a domain, we never had to tell any customer of the change, the name remains the same for everybody.

Where the email gets directed is handled by the domain supplier. That is why I have a domain. Not only is it sexy, but it also allows me to change ISPs at will and none of my correspondents knows that I might be with a new supplier. I find people have no difficulty with even memorizing the address until they get home. A domain is only about $15 a year. See me for recommendations.

14 February 2007 General Meeting Notes by John Buck

Stan Hutchings, our superb webmaster and note-taker for our General and Planning meetings, was on a vacation to SE Asia. I didn't take notes, so the brief amount you're reading here is from ~10-day-old memory.

Thanks to Maury Green's work, which included making this a joint meeting with Silicon Valley Computer Society, we had 1½ to 2 times as many attendees as usual.

Stoney and Jan Edwards delivered a very polished presentation of their photographic work and the preparation they do to create marketable and award-winning photos. Simply put, they start planning and studying long before they start shooting. Their planning includes making sure they have the right equipment and enough consumables (such as batteries). Also, they back up their work, frequently.

Although wildlife photography is the Edwards' specialty, and was our meeting's topic, the basic information they imparted can be applied to other similar endeavors.

21 February 2007 Planning Meeting Notes by Stan Hutchings edited for publication here

- The meeting was held at Jim Dinkey's house; attendees: Jim Dinkey, John Sleeman, Stan Hutchings, Nat Landes, Maurice Green, Ron Nicholas. The attendees enjoyed the refreshments served.

- Review of finances—Nat—the finances are in good shape.
- Membership—about 85 people showed up for Stoney and Jan, and about six new members.
- Needs for future funds—in about October we'll need to find a new meeting place. The Elks Lodge will close for a while. We'd like to rent where DSL or Cable or Satellite is available. We may need extra funds for rent and liability insurance.
- The club CD is progressing slowly but surely. Ron and Bill Worthington will get together with Jim sometime.
- Mail—John Sleeman—the mail was picked up last week and taken to Bev. Nothing this week. Although there is little mail, it's still important to keep the box, if only for tax purpose.

- WebSIG activities and schedules—next Tuesday [27 Feb] 7:30 at Stan's. We'll work on the SPAUG General meeting recording, and to some multimedia experimentation.
- DISIG—Maury Green—check the website for SVCS program dates and schedules. A web sig is starting as a tutorial.
- Publicity—Richard Sweet & Gene Duncan—Gene is taking the reins, and will be fully in charge in 90 days or so.
- Clinic activities and changes—the Saturday Clinic will be offered by pre-arranged appointment only. The rate is $20 per hour or so, which reduces the load.
- Other individual reports and suggestions—
  - More short demonstrations of applications of interest to the membership would be nice.
  - Perhaps a knowledgeable member could spend 10 or 15 minutes during CrossTalk to show some tips and tricks for some of the common applications. These should be useful items of general use, but unfamiliar to the members.
